History

The Village of Biscayne Park appears on the map as an inverted triangle of 0.64 square miles. It is bounded on the north by Northeast 121st Street, on the west by Biscayne Canal Number C-8/Griffing Boulevard, on the south by Northeast 107th Street, and on the east by Northeast 11th Place.

In the very early 1920s the area that is now the Village of Biscayne Park was mostly tomato fields owned by Arthur Mertlow Griffing, who had come to Florida from New York to manage the Little River Nursery. He soon established Griffing Tropical Nurseries and Groves on a seven-acre site that today is the Colonial Shopping Center along Dixie Highway and 125th Street in North Miami. Mr. Griffing was also a landscaper for Carl Fisher's Miami Beach projects. By 1917 the horticulturalist had become a developer. The nursery land was subdivided and named Griffing Biscayne Park Estates. Mr. Griffing continued his love of landscaping by carefully planting the area with shrubs and trees, so that his development resembled a huge botanical garden. In 1923 Griffing began advertising the development, targeting young families as new residents. He created environments for children to play in near their homes by laying out green spaces within broad, elongated traffic medians. The beautifully landscaped streets, medians, and park areas he designed were the backdrop for the first homes erected in the development, which cost between $4,000 and $4,500.

The Town of Biscayne Park was incorporated on December 31, 1931, and on June 16th, 1933, a state charter was granted changing the name to the Village of Biscayne Park. The Works Progress Administration built a log cabin within Biscayne Park as a symbol of Depression-era hopefulness, and of the American frontier. At a ceremony on January 24th, 1935, the finished log cabin was officially turned over to the village, and to this day has been the center for the daily operations of Biscayne Park.

Land use in the village is primarily single-family residences, with some two-family homes on the eastern and northern borders. There are no commercial or industrial uses.

The Biscayne Park 2025 Comprehensive Plan states the municipal land use goal as “to maintain for the future the existing character, location and intensity of uses in the village”. The stability and livability of the municipality regarding land use is reviewed every seven years. The document also stresses the importance of the natural environment: “The conservation goal for the Village of Biscayne Park is to assist in conserving and protecting Miami-Dade County’s natural resources of air, water, and trees.”

The village has a green space located at its center, the Burke Recreation Center, with a soccer field and a tot lot called the Parque Infantil. The recreation department offers judo, soccer, yoga, and Zumba.

Biscayne Park is governed by a mayor, a vice mayor, and three commissioners. It also has a village manager. The village has a twelve-man police department.
